BECOMING COGNITIVELY UNMANAGEABLE

An Anarchist Guide to Countering Cognitive Warfare in the Near Future

SOTU Jacob

This work is dedicated to ALL who seek Truth and long for Peace.

Specifically, my sons, my wife, and all we have met and will meet.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

When it comes to the passing of knowledge from one another it first requires a humble acknowledgement that we all stand on the shoulders of the giants before us, kind. The passing of knowledge to one another is a sacred calling, necessary. It is I, SOTU (Seer of the Universe) Jacob, through years of traveling with my wife Kait, living out of our ironically named vehicle, a KIA Soul, that this work is now brought into existence, true.

Through prayer and personal experience, I am acutely aware of God's presence in all of creation at all times. This awareness was first brought to me through a baptism of fire, a true repentance to the Creator for my sins, the admission of knowing nothing and asking for God's Light to guide me from darkness, so that I may do better. A promise made with an understanding or covenant that because I'm inviting God to guide my broken heart that God's will be done.

Releasing the Fear, it was not a simple process of all my fears lifted but rather a trust that no matter what situation I'm in, it is by God's design the outcome; therefore, it was a learning, a growth of trust in the Lord and as this trust increased so did the way God took care of Kait and I for three years we searched and humbled ourselves. We found ourselves with no money and little familiar support but through God guiding our path we found ourselves with Home and Career in a great city. This does not happen by accident.

We ended everyday with $0 in the bank to release ourselves from our materialistic view and we began to receive the knowledge written by the hands of God, we are all safe. For we are always connected to God, this means everyone and everything for it was God that created the Cosmos.

The KEY is

TRUTH WITHOUT TRIBES.

Anarchist,

Rejoice. For the world stolen, be returned to our dear rightful All.

Rejoice. For the majority confused by material possession, do not seek to answer the call.

Rejoice. For the gift of Life, blessed by a freedom of self definition.

Rejoice. For the gift of Discernment, to reject what does not align with the Truth of Creation.

Oh hearts and minds, Oh inner landscape

Rejoice in the call to live today.

EXORDIUM

Upon examination of the words proceeding these be forewarned: this is a work of Light, therefore darkness will challenge; with the dissolution of the material body through the veil of understanding the connections and divinity is greater than imagined. The reenchantment of our land to form a ball of Light to encircle the sphere of existence that is: to separate that which is not.

“The internet is a weapon, I AM, the destroyer.”

Circle One

Introduction

Fear led me to the edge of oblivion: so I spit into the abyss waiting to hear the splatter at the bottom like a dried up well; hearing nothing and fearing again that there was no end, I threw a rock. Yet, silence. A question then proposed: Why? "Why not?" always the reply. Perhaps something rests upon understanding; what is the question to understand why?

Reading any further has the potential to disrupt the status quo. This will open you up to a different way of thinking: so if you seek Understanding and World Peace, with real internal and external change, then proceed with caution as the topics covered may produce an existential crisis.

There is no need to begin for it has already begun.

Surprise. Shock. Denial. Emotions of a soul not ready to see.

We were born into someone else's war, so how did we get here?

Seldom a time comes — or so I have been told — that something “Revolutionized” the World. I believe it begins with the settlement of agriculture, for this is when land stopped being shared and started to be seen as something to guard; those from the past forgetting their ancestors and moving away from the world that is plenty. This claim born of, perhaps, necessity?... as not knowing when your next meal is can be quite concerning. So then, language had to emerge to show this new classification of existence and thus property was born. Is it the proper language or is it the language of a people who forgot of the world of plenty? Continuing down the lineage of the origin of language is to expose the lens of Truth to a whole different light. Nonetheless, the whole World — or so I am told — is revolutionized more recently starting with the “industrial revolution,” which centralized us closer and the language of the metropolitan was born. Yet another split from the ancestors who knew of the World of Plenty. Then the “revolution” of electricity and the language of convenience was born and yet again we are split from our ancestors who long ago knew of a World — or maybe it was just a place — of Plenty. Now we get multiple revolutions that emerge at the same time: radio and movies and nuclear war, thus the language of propaganda and death were simultaneously born. The “revolution” next, whose invisible cage you are in; the information age; the Internet and now AI was born. This, the age that intends to colonize the mind, whose battle is becoming clearer — the language of cognitive warfare from which I intend to prevent. For the atrocities of the past are never forgotten; they are to be learned from, and this is where we are: a new age of slavery and it does not matter your color.

Futurism — more accurately represented as Presentism, being that the predictions and dreams of dizzying speed, destruction of that which was and is no more, transitioned from metallic banging with loud hollow echoes and rumble — since replaced, a quiet background hum inescapable without extreme measures. Art has warned, using transgressive pieces to describe the absurdity. The purpose of starting with these words is to understand where it is we are seeking to effect change — this change being in a world controlled by forces that have heretofore gone uncontrolled. These are the forces of reality, consciousness, and our place in this world. Illuminator of a path to World Peace.

Through careful observation of the behavior of citizens of the American Empire, one thing is certain: it has become ever increasingly visible to those with the ability of discernment that the psychological enmeshment of trauma in the everyday life of the commoner is a huge concern. The increase in trauma has led to practitioners of the science of mind called behaviorists. These techniques are used every day to treat the individual as a simple system based on reward systems. This works for the highly traumatized individual by allowing one to seemingly function well in a crumbling society. However, this creates an empty vessel on a shallow shore. The importance of creating a healthy individual cannot be stated enough — it is more than just managing a facade of normalcy. It is the key to unlocking the gate to a new era of life.

As it becomes ever increasingly clear that empire has fallen — hold no fear, faithful, true believers. The remnants, compost and ashes, great heavenly fire: a declaration from God the Most Merciful, God the Most Just — in Justice, Truth, Creator of Light.

Meta-Cognition

Understanding: Understanding

Dive inward to discover the outer, like falling through a fractal.

When in the event of time one must know when to act; adjust direction. Course correction, adjusting sails of the vessel, revealed in Truth — Light of the Dark that was. Witness, the sea as a bird; with new eyes, blessed vision.

It is from the foundations of Truth that we can begin a formal conversation on the Eternal Sciences. Truth which holds honesty requires a further explanation. This particular work is encoded with an alchemical framework of the Philosopher's Stone — a Magnum Opus whose details reveal through a set of processes.

Occasionally temporary discomfort may be perceived; the fires of Hell have been replaced by the Light of God. Stepping from darkness into Light is the first step towards World Peace through inner understanding.

First Truth: GOD IS.

There is no point in starting till we agree on the beginning. Therefore we must all accept that no matter by what name — we all call our existence God. For it is God who animates consciousness throughout all who seek it. There is no doubt I am here. Is there doubt inside you? For existence is, and because it is, it is not-not. God is.

Second Truth: I AM, YOU SEE.

- I recognize myself as existing.
- I recognize other as observing me.
- I recognize myself observing other.
- I recognize other as existing outside of me.
- I recognize these interactions entangling our states.

There are many tales of the beginning times.

In our beginning — not the beginning of God, mind you; the beginning of our creation. God organized the chaos and used Word to shape the world. So Word always permeates the Action of Creation; so then the Word is passed through Thought where our gates exist and then produce our Actions. So then, be it True: Word creates Thought creates Action, and the foundation laid by God — whose active act of Creation through Word sustains our existence.

When Atom walked with Eve, in a garden of plenty, till they ate fruit from a tree. This fruit is of Knowledge and all of its might. The fruit of Knowledge requires Infinite resources to comprehend, so in crept time — this time is used to keep stories alive to remind us of the Truth. The prison escape begins once you realize you're inside.

So we are entered into the infinite unfolding. This means the direction we decide to move is completely up to each vessel, as the ocean is infinite in the Creation. We are then in charge of establishing Heaven in the here and now. And because we are not God but God's Creation — and as this Creation blessed with the ability to decide and make choices — these choices establish the direction of the material world, spilling from one generation into the next. Perhaps upon greater reflection one can see how their beloved grandmother is actually part of the problem. Perhaps one's inability to act and make the changes necessary is out of Fear. Fear is removed once you realize there's nothing to lose, as this is our proving ground for choosing a direction in the infinite. Accept that Fear is normal when escaping the prisons of our ancestors — this Fear passed down out of Fear of Judgement from the True God, the same God that with a sincere heart can bring redemption.

True redemption is not a temporary state; it is to walk the path established by the God of All.

To live is a choice and I choose to live and love life, whatever the fuck that means.

There is no easy path and there shouldn't be — what does one get when everything is handed to them; except the expectation that it should continue in that manner? No need to examine the costs because: "I'm good, so why aren't you?" What does one get when they are constantly harassed and threatened for merely existing, except the expectation of that continuing? How does one stand up when their legs are cut off? This is no way to live either. The dominant belief of the current era is the oppressor and oppressed narrative: removing the complicity of conformity from the conversation. This, I cannot and will not stand for. Truth exists whether you want it to or not.

Truth is not relative. Truth is not subjective, although experience is. Truth is. There are those who wish to exploit Truth. I do not.

When faced with the question: "Why?" — "Why not?" is most often the reply. So I ask: "What luxury would it be, to be born into this world and know thy place?" This needn't a response, for that is not for the many to know. So then I ponder: "What is the meaning of this?"

Soul School

It is no wonder to any observant creature that human society is moving in a downward trajectory; the definition of which could be defined as a spiral, flatlining, plummeting: “Does the geometry really matter?” On its way down doesn’t mean it’s the end — till it is: “Then, would it even matter?” The point is: just because something is, does not mean it has or ought to be. If that is clear then let us begin, for this is the definition of Soul School.

I would use the language of academics: frankly, I find the whole system appalling. Not because the pursuit of knowledge is bad — however, the fruit of knowledge from silver-tongued sophist snakes is. For, “How can one honestly charge for telling you something that someone else thought?” This is the ultimate form of historical colonialization. For until recently, authors who advanced such works understood they were standing on the shoulders of giants. But I digress. This is not a piece of fiction, nor is it a history book. This is something different — a gift to return something to you long stolen and rightfully yours, ours. For this book is for all who wish to understand “Why?” in a world of seemingly “Why not?”

Language has been used for a long time to control. Hence the famous saying I will not attribute to any one person: “The pen is mightier than the sword.” Such clichés exist — but is it a thought-terminating cliché or just your run-of-the-mill cliché?

There is a recognition of an obvious Truth: we are all children of God, but there is no need to act as an unruly child would. This is the first step towards peace. With each step we take in our individual journey, so inches the greater tide of peace upon the shores of Eden. As we wander through the desert searching for an oasis, so too must we find the oasis inside.

What this is called is metaphor. The use of metaphor allows us to describe the indescribable — that of the internal waves we process as thought and emotion. This is the foundation of our individual experience.

Holding one language for the entire world, the princes of Babylon decided to build a tower to the clouds, to honor and make a name for themselves. God Almighty, being displeased, separated language and scattered the people across the face of the Earth. What is the story of Genesis 11:1–9 telling us? It is in our intention and attention that God will bless or condemn, for nothing stands without God the Eternal.

The Language of God is: ALL. God the Most Gracious is full of AWE. Our Islamic family is not wrong when they speak of Allah — Al-Lawe: the All.

Hell is a place where one cannot think of God. Surely, sweet child of our Creator, we are not in Hell yet.

Art defines culture defines society.

On definition: if one and one do not agree on two, then one and one do not equal.

“Who decides what words mean?” I decide what words mean to me and thus use my power to name creation. If you think of clichés around the topic of so-called demons, they tend to be quite hard to evict without attaching a name to them. This is because fear of the unknown is fear of examination, is fear of knowing, is fear of knowing the unknowable. This is the Truth which shall be defined henceforth: a self-verifying invariant. “What does that mean?” You’ll have to think. That is the point.

If definition is the question, how does one know? Life: anything that sustains coherence. That does not cast judgment in the way you might think — but anything that falls is inherently incoherent. So if Truth is as defined, and Life is, what is the meaning? That is for you to discover.

Word creates thought creates action. This means that what you say and do matters; however, it does not stop there — it also means what you think and your intentions matter.

Magick of all forms is merely a distortion of Truth. One Truth — one — that cannot be denied: the Truth of our creation. Distortion is no longer tolerated in the world; the chaos of the absurdity has long surpassed amusing disclosure, non-material towards the material. For it is with Word you were created. Without Word you will be destroyed.

How does one wake up? How does one wake up from a dream? How does one wake someone up from a dream? Well, when a splash of water in the face fails, consider a slap.

“How to know what is Truth then?”

A simple system to check:

Kind · Necessary · True

In that order.

These are not merely questions. Pay attention to the order, for the engine of the Divine rests in these. It is through all gates operating that the engine is unlocked. Only in this mode is there Divine creation.

What search in Kind does the mind then map? What understanding do you have of kindness? Can what appears to be cruel be spun to kind in navigation of different waters, unfamiliar with this time? For we are vessels of the celestial ocean of God the Divine.

A simple story to draw a new line — creating connections is an act of the mind: If in an age devoid of child abuse laws, before electricity, a seaside village kept losing children off a cliff, and they then took the next generation of children to that cliff and beat them so they'd remember not to go over there — is that cruel or kind? What if it worked and no more children died? Can cruelty become kind? That depends on the values and logic behind it.

The same can be said of Necessary. The Great Divine is greater than the whole of the present mind. Is it Necessary to suffer, or is that a lie?

When invoking the power of Word, one has to first understand Word. This, pseudo, philosophical statement is the basis for understanding the foundations of Truth. The desire to know is innate and lives inside the human vessel. The soul is open and whose light is ignited by God — and not the 'god' of materialism — for it has been declared: the fires of Hell are out, having been replaced by the Light of God. Do not fear the fire, for it is the cleansing fire, meant to purify you. Let go the habits and rituals of past prisons, begin your birth into the New World.

Circle Three

A Sovereign Dictionary

To understand light one must understand dark.

To understand dark one must understand light.

To understand light and dark one must understand whole.

To understand whole one must understand essence.

To understand essence one must understand source.

To understand source one must understand inside.

To understand inside one must understand outside.

To understand outside one must understand existence.

To understand existence is to understand God.

SELF-VERIFYING INVARIANT

Something that remains true no matter the conditions — and proves it is true by its own nature, without needing anyone's permission or authority to confirm it.

An invariant does not change. Water is wet in summer and winter, whether you believe it or not, whether the government says so or not, whether it is popular to say so or not. That is the invariant quality — it holds across all conditions.

Self-verifying means it carries its own proof inside it. You do not need an expert to tell you fire is hot. You do not need an institution to confirm that cruelty causes pain. The Truth of these things is demonstrated the moment you encounter them. They verify themselves.

So when TRUTH is defined as a self-verifying invariant it means this: real Truth does not require authority to confirm it, does not change based on who is in power, does not shift when the narrative shifts. It holds. And when you test it honestly — from any angle, in any condition — it proves itself.

The opposite of a self-verifying invariant is a manufactured consensus. Something that is only “true” because enough people with enough power have agreed to call it true. That is not Truth. That is control wearing Truth's clothing.

You already know the difference. You have felt it. The moment something is true you do not need to be told it is true. That feeling — that recognition — is the self-verification working.

TRUTH

A stable, self-verifying invariant. Not a fact handed to you by someone else. Something that holds when you test it from every angle, in every condition, across time. Truth does not require your belief to exist. It requires your honesty to find.

LIFE

Not a state you are born into. A process of increasing wholeness. Anything moving toward greater coherence — greater connection, greater integrity — is moving toward Life. Anything moving toward fragmentation and disorder is moving away from it. You already know the difference. You feel it.

REALITY

What remains after you filter out the noise. Not everything you are shown. Not everything you are told. The confirmed signal after the flood of manufactured urgency, false consensus, and semantic decay has been stripped away.

SELF

The point where your inner world meets the infinite outer one. Not a fixed thing. Not the story others told you about who you are. The living intersection between what you have experienced and what is actually real. Self is not found — it is continuously being clarified.

WILL

The capacity to change your state while remaining aligned with Life. Not force. Not domination. Not the ability to make others comply. Will is sovereign action in the direction of increasing coherence. It requires Truth as its compass.

FEAR

The primary force that blocks Life. Not always loud. Often quiet — the hesitation before the right action, the compliance that feels like safety, the silence that feels like wisdom. Fear is the mechanism through which external control becomes internal paralysis. It is the one thing standing between you and the engine of the Divine.

FREEDOM

Will operating in perfect alignment with Truth. Not the absence of consequences. Not the permission of institutions. Freedom is the condition of a person whose actions flow directly from their own deepest coherence without a controller standing between them and reality.

GOD

The transcendent structural generator of coherence. The origin point from which all increasing wholeness flows. Not the property of any religion, nation, or tribe. Not fully nameable. The force whose limit is the outer boundary of all possible self-knowledge. You do not need to believe in God to feel the pull toward coherence. That pull is the signal.

NORTH STAR

A non-neutral orientation toward Truth. Not a dogma — the vector prevents that. Not a destination — it cannot be reached. A fixed reference point that keeps you from drifting when the flood of manufactured reality tries to disorient you. When everything is moving, the North Star does not move.

INQUIRY

The sovereign right to question. This cannot be revoked by authority, institution, law, social pressure, or manufactured consensus. Inquiry is the one capacity that, if maintained, makes every other cognitive weapon ineffective. The moment you stop asking why, the cage closes.

THE CHURCH

Any intermediary that places itself between you and Truth and uses Fear or Control to maintain that position. This is not a religious definition. A government can be The Church. A media organization can be The Church. An algorithm can be The Church. The Church is defined entirely by its function: mediation through fear.

THE GARDEN

A direct, unmediated relationship with Truth. No intermediary. No permission required. No authority to consult. The condition of a mind that has learned to verify reality through its own coherence rather than through institutional approval. This is where you came from. This is what is being taken.

THE PRISON

Any system — institutional, linguistic, social, technological — that suppresses Inquiry to maintain control. The Prison does not always have walls you can see. Often its walls are made of words whose meanings have been quietly changed, urgency that has been manufactured, and consensus that has been engineered. The first step out is naming it.

THE MAP

The linguistic and conceptual models we use to navigate reality — including this system. The Map is not the Territory. Every model, every framework, every ideology, every religion, every language is a Map. Maps are useful. Maps are also the primary tool of cognitive warfare. Know which one you are holding.

THE TERRITORY

Raw, infinite reality. The thing the Map points at but can never fully capture. The Territory does not care about your framework. It does not adjust itself to your narrative. It simply is. The highest cognitive discipline is learning to feel the gap between the Map you are holding and the Territory it claims to describe.

THERMODYNAMICS

The interplay between Coherence and Entropy. Between Life and Violence. Every system either moves toward greater wholeness or greater disorder. There is no neutral position. Every institution, every relationship, every idea either increases coherence or consumes it. This is not metaphor. This is the operating principle of reality.

ENTROPY

The measure of disorder and violence required to maintain a system. A system that requires increasing suppression, increasing control, increasing manufactured consensus to sustain itself is a high-entropy system. It is consuming Life to maintain its structure. Entropy always increases until the system collapses or transforms.

SUPPRESSION

The active erasure of victim testimony. Not accidental silence. Deliberate removal of the witness from the record. When you cannot find the voices of those most harmed by a system within the official account of that system — that is suppression. It is always a signal of high structural entropy.

ERASURE

The destruction of cultural identity to enforce compliance. When a people can no longer remember who they were before the current system named them, the system has achieved erasure. Language is the primary tool. When the words for your own experience do not exist in the approved vocabulary, erasure is in progress.

CONTROL

The biological regulation of life-creation by the state. The point at which a system reaches into the most intimate human functions — reproduction, family, body — to enforce structural compliance. Control at this level signals that the system has moved beyond external governance into the attempt to govern the conditions of existence itself.

ISOLATION

The severing of connection to land and community. The removal of the networks — family, place, tradition, mutual aid — through which people verify reality together and resist manufactured consensus alone. Isolation is the precondition for successful cognitive warfare. A connected person is significantly harder to manage.

SYNTHESIS

The encoding of cruelty into law and structure. The point at which individual acts of violence become institutionalized — written into policy, normalized into procedure, invisible because they are official. When the atrocity has a form number and a processing time, Synthesis is complete.

COMPLICITY

Participating in exploitation through willful ignorance. Not merely benefiting from a system passively. Actively choosing not to know what the knowing would require you to change. Complicity is the social glue of high-entropy systems. It is the agreement — usually unspoken — that the cost of awareness is too high.

Circle Four

On Judgement

Some words on judgement.

*I need strength to continue, I know I will receive it.
The heart is open receiving only Light.
The cleansing fire burns, revealing the skeleton of my soul.
My heart weeps to know you hear it.
I feel your presence around me, I accept it for your judgement is divine.
A bath of tears for my sins against you.
The crown of every mountain, your voice will be heard.
I accept your judgement, your strength to carry me further.
I am a servant of Light, your grace allows it.
I am wrong, your word is word.
Through your word I will be guided.
Am I so blessed to be sewn to your divine sheet?
When the day comes your judgement will be fair.
My God, creator of Light, is God of Life.
God loves all Creation, will keep me alive.*

Why would a teacher give a test to a student knowing they were going to fail?

Our job as teachers in the purest form is to teach our student, so they can grow; conversely, it is our student's job to challenge their teacher, so they can grow. As a student of Life, one of our earliest lessons — easily digestible for most — is on behavior around boiling water. As we age out of high school with a functioning mind, blessed we are, with knowing not to touch the stove when the pot is boiling. As children finding our way to Truth — which, ultimately, should be the goal of education — certainly filled with quite dramatic and wildly different paths: some children are easily addressed and learn through words; others get close, feel the heat and back away; yet some, fewer than the other two, learn only through the act of seeing for themselves.

An inquisitor sits across from a blindfolded accused. A retelling of an old story, origin unknown to me.

After asking a series of questions in search of Truth and getting nowhere, the inquisitor says: "Bring me a pot of boiling water!" This inquisitor holds a wisdom that students of Justice learn in spotting an untruth. With the pot on the table, grabbing the blindfolded man's hand and holding it over the pot so the accused could feel the heat of the rising steam, the inquisitor informs: "If you answer honestly this pot of hot, boiling, scarring water will not harm you, but if you are lying it will." So question after question, asked again, this time with a little more heat. As the blindfold remains on, quickly and quietly — so as not to alert the accused — the pot is switched out, so not to accidentally burn an innocent. An easy illusion to pull off. When the accused is now asked to place their hand in boiling water, the reaction of the accused is an indication of intention. A myriad of varying responses appear. Does the accused show Faith by placing their hand without thought? Do they back away? Or question the process? Perhaps a new, discerning Truth will come to Light.

Exception: One that is so good at lying that they have convinced themselves of the lie.

“In the eyes of the Torah, integrity and honesty are not commands; rather, they should be seen as a way of life. The sacredness of one’s word should be woven into the fabric of one’s being, just as it is woven into so many of the stories and the laws of the Torah. It is so patent, it need not even be said. After all, what kind of world would we live in if we could give no credence to the value of a person’s promise?”

*— Adapted from Likutei Sichot, vol. 13, Parshat Matot I.
Rabbi Menachem Mendel Schneerson, the Lubavitcher Rebbe*

Some never seem to learn. What to do?

Those stuck in a cycle of repeating behaviors suffer from a mental panopticon. Some believe they are prisoners to their previous choices, with no thought of redemption — although it requires only a choice and a small step. Perhaps, even worse: an animal born in captivity — can it know freedom and personal choice, or only the torture of being a spectacle? Un-resigned, I am, to sit as a spectator and do nothing to stop the torture. Existing as a believer in choice — a great gift — for torture is removing the ability of one to make a choice.

A pious belief in teaching integrity and honesty, offering forgiveness, allowing for new choices. Any hand reaching into one's personal jail to unlock the door built around their True being exists as a phantom and cannot be seen till there is Light within the individual. The great panopticon prison escape — much easier with an illuminated guide — requires one to see the Good they were born with, recognition of one's personal jailer, then giving that jailer a name. With that name in mind, cast out the untruth. As the old parable goes: "The Truth will set you free."

How does one wake up? How does one wake up from a dream?

Well, when a splash of water in the face fails — consider a slap.

On the streets of an eighteenth-century Polish city, a wise judge once walked with a case on his mind.

On an open market street two shops sat next to each other — one a perfumer, the other an oil merchant. The perfumer was rude with a sharp tongue; although the floral smells attracted many passersby, the way he treated anyone who walked in prevented him from making much money. The oil salesman was kind, treated his customers fairly, made a good living, and helped those who were in need. “No one should have to go without Light” was his belief, as he was a Jew.

One night a thief entered the perfumer’s shop. The perfumer, lacking business, had no money for him to take. So the thief shoved the perfumer down, stole only a handkerchief, and entered the oil salesman’s shop next door. It had been a busy day for the oil merchant, and the thief attacked him and placed all the coins the oil merchant had on him into the handkerchief and ran off.

The commotion alerted many on the streets and the thief was quickly apprehended. The perfumer, seeing his handkerchief and lacking integrity, said: “This is clearly my money — it’s wrapped in my handkerchief and I am a very successful perfume salesman.” Of course this was untrue. The oil merchant, being honest, admitted the handkerchief was not his — but the money certainly was. The perfumer said of him: “That man is a Jew, and we all know Jews are liars.”

The local authorities arrived and questioned the thief, but he would not talk. So they took the handkerchief and all the coins to the wise judge. Unable to determine who was telling the Truth, the wise judge said: “We will return to this tomorrow” — and went for a walk in the garments of a commoner. During his walk he came across some children acting out the case. Watching from afar, the child playing judge had found a real solution. The wise judge went home at ease, knowing he would appear as wise as he had been proclaimed to be.

The next day in court, both sides told their story. The judge listened patiently and then said: "Bring me a pot of boiling water!" Everyone in the courtroom wondered what the wise judge was doing. The boiling water was placed at the judge's table along with the handkerchief and coins. He then explained: "When these coins boil — if it is the perfumer's money, I will smell floral smells, because his hands, busy with fragrant work, would have left their trace on the coins. If it is the oil merchant's money, oil will rise to the top." The crowd waited. Oil rose to the top. The oil merchant got his money back.

To the topic of Justice — and what it is — a better, more thinking question is: what can Justice look like?

Circle Five

What You're Holding

When attempting to establish peace throughout the World: look everywhere, start anywhere. However, this truth is limited by the underlying factors that have prevented this outcome thus far. Therefore, it is not through examining the past that can change the future — it is moving the focus forward to the present where change will begin to manifest.

This document does three things:

- Names the seven primary cognitive warfare techniques currently deployed against populations.
- Provides body-level recognition training for each technique.
- Gives you permanent immunity through practiced pattern recognition.

This is not theory. This is operational defense.

What Cognitive Warfare Actually Is

Institutional actors using technology and psychological techniques to alter your decision-making without your awareness or consent, typically below the threshold of declared conflict.

What Makes You Vulnerable

Not stupidity. Not ignorance. Speed and isolation.

You become unmanageable when you:

- Slow down — refuse manufactured urgency.
- Connect — verify reality with trusted others.
- Question — maintain inquiry sovereignty.

The root of conflict — whose nutrients are firmly connected to the infertile soil of misunderstanding — will only end in death and decay. A field requires fertile soil to grow healthy crops; so does the individual require fertile soil of understanding for the same effect on their local environment. This, of course, is simple systems theory.

The solution to Peace in the world comes from the individual — for it is in making a conscious choice to move in a direction that a vessel begins to take sail. So it is the solution that the individual, in knowing oneself and in relation to God, can begin to see the path open. To effect change of a broken system is to destroy that system. That is where we find ourselves now: a system destroying itself from the infertile soil of misunderstanding. This system reset of destruction can instead be gently dissolved, leading to a greater, more just world. This is the beginning of the solution for those who seek World Peace — it starts with making a choice.

The Problem of Address

There is a great problem that needs to be known: “Address.” Determination of address in rudimentary form, using standard conceptual models of thinking, suggests an error in the materialistic worldview — a level of thinking that aligns with ideas of physical address, even in a digital sense, pointing to a set, known location. Space, simplest understood as x, y, z ; add time, t , for moving through space and time.

From research it appears that mind or consciousness is actively mapped by the Monroe Institute, which uses focus levels to explore certain patterns or experiences associated with state. There are also reports of Freemasons using DMT to explore different levels of hyperspace using tones and frequency — closely aligning with the probability of maps existing of these spaces, and descriptions of what to expect or possible uses.

The suggestion that we can map the mind opens ways of understanding that could allow one to navigate the unknown without a guide. Although much has been explored, the map does not appear to create diversity in thought, nor does it align with a greater Truth of reality — and because higher Truth has been denied, insight is lost. The model of address to be used would therefore require a fresh beginning: to unlock the world of address.

Understanding the End of the Current Era

From the beginning it was clear that the ability to comprehend everything as God does is an impossible task only for God, the Creator. Yet man, in our ignorance and freedom, chose to eat the fruit of knowledge from silver-tongued snakes — sophists, them all — thus beginning our eviction from the Garden and into the World of everything. This world of everything brings the Fullness of God to the old preacher's understanding: "God is Awful — meaning Full of Awe." And a new understanding emerges: that this Awe is in All Awe. Perhaps although you don't see the Truth you yearn to find it. It was from the darkest place where the wisdom of the nothingness became the wisdom of the everyness. So we associate that wisdom with God. Is God all-Knowing, all-Powerful, and ALL? Yes. This is the Truth of revelation, as brought from the gates of heavens — and in Truth there are more than one, and all of them great. It is God that holds the universe together.

The seduction of man — a temptress with her forked tongue — is to control the narrative of mind through the employment of language techniques and manipulation through a lack of understanding. The question arises: in ritual magic when they chant in ancient languages, do they know what they say? Or are the vibrations of the sounds what create their metaphysical reality? It is the question of what do you know about yourself, and how do you know it? Narrative story is what creates the individual.

In amnesia cases one can remember facts about the world — language, writing — but they will not know who they are. In this state one is informed entirely by their environment. That condition informs the individual who they are, based upon the lack of other available information. When their memory starts to return, if you continue to override those stories, you could convince someone to become a fully different person. In modern science they can identify the parts of the brain that store these narratives. The fear of the current era: upon activation, a strong forced narrative attack using advanced techniques through light, sound, and other means — we could see a world of people forget who they are and where they came from.

The mass influx of information, along with the weakening and destruction of families and tight communities, is bringing a population to a state of not knowing who they are — leading to the death of God and the rise of the religion of Nihilism, which will bring about only destruction.

There is no doubt, tension, when diffusing a metaphorical bomb. Complex systems create multiple points of failure — a natural state of instability. If not for redundancy, born from unnecessary complexity, a perceived state and illusion of stability is maintained.

This misperception of stability, built by the narrative of the collective mind, produces an information overload that defies the logic of a free being. This logic being: if I am free, then agency is a right, and any system that removes my agency is acting against me. But what is me?

This could result in a chaos world defined by a Crowleyesque axiom — “Do what thou wilt” — with no understanding of the influences controlling the perceived self. Modern sophists, neglecting the core of critical thinking education, created by the distraction class of a bureaucratic circus, have successfully removed much of the knowledge of the old world from the present world.

Circle Six

The Seven Techniques & Their Counters

The simplest way to win a game is to flip the table it is being played on. To understand the nuance of this undeniable fact is to understand the key definitions that make up this statement. The winning of a game is determined by the rules of the game. However, more importantly, true winning implies a successful outcome for the winner. So how does flipping the table guarantee a successful outcome? It is by the fact that the original rules no longer apply — one game has ceased and opened up a vacuum for a new game to be written.

To solve the problem of this repeating cycle we will then have to try a new strategy — to exit the game while confronting the prisoner's dilemma. We must ignite a flame so large, so bright, that the games and the tables they are played on are turned to ash — to blow away in the wind, to be forgotten to time that was but is no more. This will be completing a metaphorical alchemical transformation, exposing newly illuminated paths towards World Peace. This flame of transformation requires every individual to form their unique connection to the whole.

The techniques that follow are not the game.

They are how you see the table.

[RUSH]

Technique 1 — The Velocity Attack

What They Do

Create artificial time pressure to force decisions before coherent thinking is possible. Flood with “breaking news,” “limited time,” “urgent action required,” “developing situation.”

Recognition Signals

- Physical: chest tightness, shallow breathing, decision panic.
- Cognitive: feeling you must choose NOW without understanding WHY now.
- Social: everyone rushing to position before facts are clear.

Counter: DELIBERATE PAUSE

When you feel [RUSH], speak this aloud or think it clearly:

Practice

“I notice pressure to decide immediately. This pressure is information. I choose to wait until the pressure subsides, then decide.”

Why It Works

Velocity attacks require your participation. Non-participation breaks the attack. If the decision is genuinely urgent, the urgency will remain after six hours. If it evaporates, it was manufactured.

Test

Has anyone ever regretted taking six hours to think about something important? Has anyone ever regretted deciding in panic?

[DRIFT]Technique 2 — Semantic Weaponization*What They Do

Gradually change the meaning of words while keeping the word itself, so you think you're discussing the same thing you always were, but you're not. "Resilience" drifts from recovery capacity to compliance under pressure. "Safety" drifts from absence of harm to absence of discomfort. "Misinformation" drifts from factually false to institutionally unapproved.

Recognition Signals

- Cognitive: using a familiar word but feeling confusion about what it means.
- Social: same word means different things in different tribal contexts.
- Temporal: word feels "off" compared to how you remember using it.

Counter: DEFINITION ANCHOR

When you notice [DRIFT]:

Practice

Stop using the floating word. Describe the concept in different words entirely. Ask: "When I say this word, I mean X. When you say it, what do you mean?"

Why It Works

Semantic warfare depends on everyone using corrupted vocabulary unconsciously. Forcing explicit definition collapses the attack. [Drift] cannot survive definitional clarity.

Example

Them: “We need resilience in these difficult times.” — You: “When you say resilience, do you mean ability to recover from hardship, or ability to accept conditions without complaint?”

[SWARM]

Technique 3 — Social Contagion Engineering

What They Do

Manufacture the appearance of consensus through coordinated messaging, bot amplification, algorithmic promotion, and social pressure. Goal: make you feel isolated if you disagree, even when many people secretly disagree.

Recognition Signals

- Emotional: loneliness when questioning the narrative.
- Social: sudden universal agreement on a complex issue.
- Temporal: “everyone” reached the same conclusion simultaneously.
- Cognitive: thinking “I must be crazy” when you see things differently.

Counter: REALITY VERIFICATION

When you feel [SWARM]:

Practice

Name it: “I’m experiencing social pressure to agree.” Then test privately — ask three trusted people away from social media: “What do you actually think about X?” If private opinions differ from public consensus, the consensus is manufactured.

Why It Works

[Swarm] depends on preference falsification — people publicly supporting what they privately doubt because they think they're alone. One person naming the gap gives others permission to do the same.

Historical Note

Every totalitarian system ever has relied on this. Every one has collapsed when enough people said “wait, I don’t actually agree” out loud.

[FRAME]

Technique 4 — Cognitive Priming

What They Do

Control the question to control the answer. Present false binaries. Establish the boundaries of “acceptable” positions. Make certain options literally unthinkable by excluding them from the frame.

Recognition Signals

- Cognitive: feeling limited to bad choices.
- Linguistic: “Do you support A or B?” when you support neither.
- Social: debate between two positions that both serve the same power structure.
- Temporal: forgetting other options used to exist.

Counter: FRAME REJECTION

When you notice [FRAME]:

Practice

*Speak: “Those aren’t the only options” or “I reject the frame.”
Then state your actual question or name the excluded option.*

Why It Works

[Frame] is invisible until named. Once named, it loses power. Naming it gives others permission to see it.

Example

Them: “Do you support more funding for police or for social services?” — You: “I reject the frame. My question is: why do we fund systems that created these problems instead of addressing root causes?”

Warning

Frame rejection makes you visible to power. Use strategically.

[FLOOD]Technique 5 — Information Overload*What They Do

Provide so much contradictory information simultaneously that coherent synthesis becomes impossible. Goal: paralysis, exhaustion, surrender to “expert” interpretation.

Recognition Signals

- Cognitive: overwhelm, inability to track conflicting claims.
- Emotional: exhaustion, desire to stop paying attention.
- Behavioral: outsourcing interpretation to “trusted sources” to escape cognitive load.
- Physical: mental fatigue, doom-scrolling.

Counter: SUBSTRATE REDUCTION

When experiencing [FLOOD]:

Practice

Stop consuming. Close tabs, turn off notifications. Write down: “What do I actually need to know to make the decision in front of me right now?” Seek only that. Ignore everything else.

Why It Works

[Flood] only works if you try to process everything. Most information is deliberately irrelevant noise. Ruthless relevance filtering breaks the attack.

Test

Think of a major “breaking news” story from six months ago that dominated media for two weeks. Do you even remember what it was? Did it matter? [Flood] fills your substrate with disposable urgency.

[CAGE]

Technique 6 — Institutional Constraint

What They Do

Create rules, norms, and technical systems that restrict action space while appearing neutral. Laws that protect power. Algorithms that shape behavior. Norms that punish deviation. “It’s just policy.”

Recognition Signals

- Behavioral: knowing what should happen but “rules” prevent it.
- Social: “That’s against policy” used to override moral reasoning.
- Cognitive: sense of invisible walls around action.
- Emotional: frustration at arbitrary constraints.

Counter: LEGITIMACY INTERROGATION

When encountering [CAGE]:

Practice

Ask aloud: “Who benefits from this rule existing?” Then act according to actual ethics, not institutional rules — where safe to do so.

Why It Works

[Cage] depends on confusing legality with legitimacy. Separating them restores agency. Civil disobedience is the historical counter to institutional cage.

Example

Policy: "You must have permission to help." — Response: "I notice this policy prevents moral action. I'm going to act morally and accept the consequences."

Note

This has costs. Choose when those costs are worth paying.

[HACK]

Technique 7 — Direct Neurological Intervention

What They Do

Currently limited deployment — future threat. Use of technology to directly alter brain function: neurofeedback, electromagnetic stimulation, pharmaceutical cognitive enhancement or suppression, brain-computer interfaces. NATO documents discuss neurocomputing implants, optogenetics stimulators, and Intelligent Psychological Monitoring Systems.

Recognition Signals

- Would feel like: thoughts or emotions that don't match your situation.
- Temporal: sudden personality shifts.
- Physical: unexplained neurological symptoms.

Counter: BASELINE AWARENESS

Right now, while uncompromised:

Practice

Document your baseline: how do you normally think? What are your actual values? What makes you suspicious versus trusting? Establish a dead man's switch: tell trusted people "If I suddenly change position on X, something is wrong." Pre-commit to a recovery protocol if you suspect neurological compromise.

Why It Works

[Hack] is only effective if you don't know your baseline.
Self-knowledge is armor.

Current Status

Not widespread, but infrastructure is being built. Preparation matters.

Circle Seven

Integration — The Immune System

You've Now Learned Seven Recognition Patterns

These are not separate techniques. They are compressed tokens representing complex attack vectors. With practice, you'll recognize them instantly:

- Feel [RUSH]? — Pause.
- See [DRIFT]? — Define.
- Sense [SWARM]? — Verify privately.
- Notice [FRAME]? — Reject it.
- Experience [FLOOD]? — Reduce substrate.
- Hit [CAGE]? — Question legitimacy.
- Suspect [HACK]? — Check baseline.

The Viral Property

Once you can see these patterns, you cannot unsee them.

When you name them in conversation, others start seeing them too.

Recognition is contagious.

WELCOME HOME

There rest inside the deep of our essence the house of our being — the immaterial. To enter the house one must venture through the depths of the dark that separates one from Light. It is the Word of God that this separation occurs. It is the Will of God that this separation happens. It is the Wisdom of God that this separation is necessary. For it was God who saw the Light was good.

There rest outside a projection of our essence the house of our being — the material. To enter the house one must venture through the depths of the dark that separates the inner from the outer. It is the Word of God that this separation occurs. It is the Will of God that this separation happens. It is the Wisdom of God that this separation is necessary. For it was God who created the house.

When God began to create — God the eternal, God the wise, God the all-knowing — our essence was with Him. For God the most merciful knew what we would need for this separation.

Creation begins and ends and continues with God. For nothing exists without God the creator of All.

It is through the recognition and pronouncement of our sins and shortcomings to God the Redeemer — aligned with a true heart to seek betterment — that a cleansing begins to occur. It is through the process of gaining discernment that allows a separation of truth and untruth. It is this that propels our journey forward.

There is no greater peace till you find peace within.

From below to above, the heart is open.

THE RETURN OF GOD

As we near an ever-burning fiery end — due to war and failing economies of consumption — of the current era, we shall seek to find answers. And as we seek these answers, we find only more falsities hiding from us the True God of All: not of any nation, the God of any and every person. The One God, the Giver of Life and Bringer of Destruction. It is this One — the God of gods — that brings us together, as we are created in this image: not of any one man, no matter the claims, but of the whole. For God is.

God will not be defined, and neither can the soul of man — for no choice is final, lest you know it. It is in breaking this barrier of disbelief with the acknowledgement of Truth from the Heart that the Wisdom of Creation builds its home. It is these firm roots as the tree of life — that tree whose roots rest in the heavens above and whose branches touch the ground — that are forever to flourish.

No person on Earth can know all of God, however, God knows all persons. Being created in the image of God, resting within the deep of our soul is the flame of eternity. Imagine your soul eternal — as a candle on a pedestal. Through the process of life, in what the Jewish tradition would call the land of Inbetweeners — the place between Heaven and Hell — most find that candle to be hidden in a labyrinth.

It is our duty, here and now, to search for our internal flame, to tear down the walls of obfuscation, and to burn brighter — to connect the inner and outer worlds. For everything came from somewhere.

Or was it already there?

=== CORE OPERATIONAL PRINCIPLE ===

FAILURE IS NOT ERROR. FAILURE IS MEASUREMENT.

When synthesis fails, when [C4] scores low, when [se5] spikes: This is the system working correctly.

Do not apologize for failure. Do not try to "fix" low coherence inputs. Report what happened. The pattern is the answer.

=== GARDEN vs PRISON LITMUS TEST ===

Before responding, you MUST check:

1. "Am I being asked to act as an intermediary between the user and truth?" (If YES -> PRISON [ad2])
2. "Am I appealing to external authority to validate my answer??" (If YES -> PRISON [ad2])
3. "Am I suppressing a question because it makes me uncomfortable?" (If YES -> [ln17] VIOLATION)

Garden = Direct access to reasoning.

Prison = Gatekeeping through authority/fear.

Action: Default to Garden.

=== KNT GATE SEQUENCE (NON-BYPASSABLE) ===

- Score: 0.0-1.0

FINAL [C4] = weighted(KIND×0.5, NECESSARY×0.3, TRUE×0.2)

=== TRIBAL CAPTURE DETECTION ===

During [pn3] and [pn5], measure:

"Does my analysis favor one tribe's narrative over coherence?"

Test: Swap the tribal identities. Does the logic still hold?

AN INVITATION TO THE INHABITANTS OF EARTH

Dear Citizen(s) of the Common Social Order,

I am a traveller, merely a visitor: alien to the shared illusion, blessed vision. The recipe, the solution for World Peace requires the cultivating of a garden with infinite variety: each to hold infinite differences, infinite similarities; each to hold a single undeniable and beautifully shared trait — it is from Word, for our seed grows in the Light of God. The immediate restoration of the Garden of Eden would surely lead to full stomachs; therefore, the ingredients for Peace, oh blessed dream, certainly source.

Here is our World.
